DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tan in view of Shrier and Takeda, all of record. Each of the cited references show a metal carrier means for coupling a semiconductor die to a circuit substrate. For example, as shown in Fig. 5 of Tan, a metal layer (506) has a plurality of stamped bumps (110) arranged around the die (504) and where the bumps may be formed in a conical shape, as shown in Fig. 3b of Tan.

Similarly, Shrier, in Fig. 15, also shows a carrier means having a metal layer (103) provided with stamped bumps (105). Shrier also teaches such claimed features such as multiple layers, including a base metal (105), along with sublayers (101) and (107).

Takeda also teaches a carrier means that includes metal bumps (shown at the region 5 in Fig. 3).

Taken together, these references show all of the claimed features of the invention. One skilled in the art would be motivated to combine these references because they all deal with a similar device structure, and while Tan does not explicitly discuss such well known ancillary features as the use of copper, gold or aluminum contacts, these features are shown by Takeda, and would provide superior electrical conductivity when incorporated into the device of Tan. In addition, the use of extra sublayers, as taught by Shrier, would also help to reduce unwanted electrical resistance at the contacts used by Tan. Furthermore, because these references all deal with related subject matter, they are properly combinable.
